Speaking at the event, Khoisan chief Hennie van Wyk said: "It is important for me to shed the mantle of coloured identity and assume the mantle of Khoi heritage."

Aside from various South African cultures being represented as part of the event, there was also strong pan-African representation.

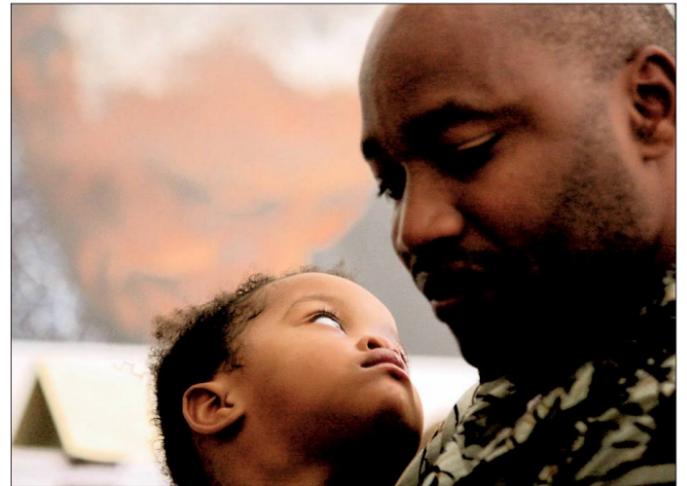

Poet and praise singer Mandisi Mtyhida of Khayelitsha was proud to represent Xhosa culture.

Joy Phafhu of Maitland enjoyed the gathering of different cultures.

Leaders of the Africa Unite's school club programme proudly represented their schools and communities.

Jean-Marie Nkurunziza, senior trainer at Sonke Gender Justice Network, took his daughter, Latoya, along for a father-and-daughter outing.

From Monday October 20 to Wednesday October 22, at venues across the CBD, the African Arts Institute hosted its Business of Arts Master Classes. The classes, which covered the disciplines of music, performance, visual arts and film, were held to help creatives working in those fields make a success of their chosen careers.

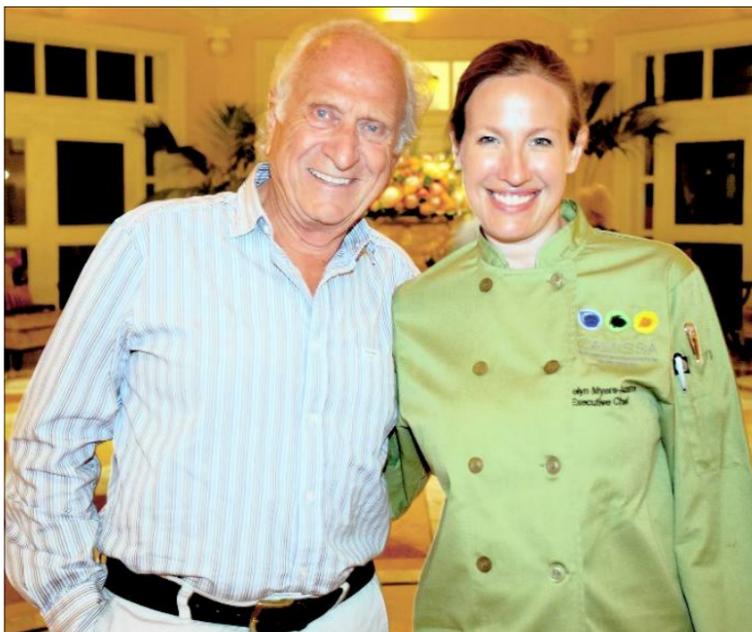

Left: Dedication to their craft was central to those who attended the classes.

Right: The music classes, held at the District Six Homecoming Centre, covered topics such as how to promote one's music through various platforms such as social media.

Award-winning chef, Michel Roux, pictured left, caught up with the Table Bay's executive chef, Jocelyn Myers-Adams, right, during his visit to South Africa last week. He and his wife spent the weekend at The Table Bay Hotel and were treated to authentic South African cuisine at the hotel's Camissa Brasserie. Mr Roux is an internationally-acclaimed, French-born chef and restaurateur who, with his brother Albert, founded Le Gavroche, which later went on to become the first three Michelin-starred restaurant in Britain. Mr Roux and his family are world-renowned chefs. Many also know him from his guest appearances as a judge on MasterChef: The Professionals.
